For the fourth consecutive year, Johannes Vogt Gallery is pleased to present its annual summer group show on a private property in East Hampton, "The Barn Show 2018." Featuring the works of nearly 30 artists, "The Barn Show" is Johannes Vogt Gallery's response to the growing need for new and unexpected exhibition models in the contemporary art world and marks a solid outpost of the gallery's premises on the Lower East Side in New York City.

By engaging the site's unique historic location, "The Barn Show" is an opportunity to create an ambitious group exhibition with artists that bridge mediums, generations, and geographies. From figurative and abstract painting to radical sculptures, digital media and photography, the show builds upon the history of the East End as a site of artistic creation.

Featuring artist icons from previous decades such as David Wojnarowicz whose retrospective opens at the Whitney Museum this summer as well as much talked about new talents such as

JOHANNES VOGT

Kennedy Yanko (from Brooklyn, NY) “The Barn Show” offers a survey of the state of contemporary art in 2018 and presents well known artistic positions alongside new talents to discover.
